

Don Marquis' Column

The Souful Snig-
Galadiah Snig,
Fried of Fothergill Finch,
Has been Wed;
He never again
Will feel poverty's pinch—
But Fothergill fears That his Art is dead!

Perceval Ruskin Galadiah Snig
Is a Poet;
Compared to him, Keats was a sordid Young pig—Snig "never took Gold
For the Songs that he wrote."

Snig frequently spoke,
With an upper-case S,
Of his Soul;
A negligent elegance Showed in his dress,
And the "Uplift of Art"
Was his "ultimate goal."

Said Soul had drunk Love, Snig remarked to me once,
To the Lees,
Yet it still was Athirst!
Snig's lyrical stunts
Were as full of that stuff
As a pup is of fleas.

At Hermione's parties
Dear Galadiah oft
Would remark:
That his true home, he felt,
Was Somewhere Aloft,
While his Soul groined through life Like a Child in the Dark.

His Aura was mauve—
At least, so he said—
But his eyes
Were a deep psychic brown,
And the hair on his head Ambrosial
And lengthy,
The same as his ties.

Galadiah Snig,
With them Auras and things,
Went to Tea,
And he Read from his Works,
And he futtered his wings,
And he sighed psychic sighs,
And held cups on his knees.

I spoke to him kindly:
"Get up to yourself!"
I opined:
That it's noble and soulful
To scorn print and puff,
But, sweet psychic bard,
You cut it too fine!

Galadiah answered me
Never a word,
But I think
That a barely perceptible Flutter of his forefathers who held
The prophet's bald cranium in derision,
But they laugh at the bare possibility.

At any rate, Snig,
This very last week,
(And his Soul)
Marched up to the altar
And wed (so to speak)
Two railways,
A bank,
And six millions
In coal.

So Perceval
Ruskin
Galadiah
Snig
Goes his way,
Still scornful of gold,
While the rest of us dig In our old sordid fashion For pelf and for pay.

Mild Adventures About Town.
Sir: Sometimes in exercising rigid economy one is rewarded by rather enjoying it—the second balcony, for instance. To be told to run around to the entrance on the next block gives one a salutary sense of inferiority, and the ascent a salutary sense of aversity.

Some youthful anarchists peeped next me in the first row have introduced me to a most fascinating pursuit, namely, drooping programs and other light missiles on the 32 balconies below. I have reminded my young friends of the fate that overtook their forefathers who held the prophet's bald cranium in derision, but they laugh at the bare possibility.

My marksmanship has been pronounced remarkable, the perfect tribute being the involuntary exclamation, "One cigar!" You have only to imagine yourself over Berlin to achieve some really Tallesque results.

If the show is of a doubtful nature this may be administered as a rebuke, tacit but telling and altogether fitting for ribaldry. At one performance I even felt impelled to administer a chocolate cream.—F. W.

Nemesis.
Oh, thou pale Captain of the Stars, whose eyes Peer still beneath the helmet of the night, Whose eyes looked down upon our children's plight, Whose heart still echoes with their hopeless cries, We, who forget not that grim bulk that lies Off far Kinsale, nor shall forget the kite Limbed like a King, that sank her, see thy light Down down these years of darkness and surmise.

For when the Traitor struck, when the pale ghost
Of the dread deep leapt on, unswerving, quick, It brought us back to God, but him whose dart
It was sent down! Down went the Prussian boast!
Junker and Superman, Real Politik, These that old Sphinx, the Sea, took to her heart!

der if he's up to anything.

FLATTERY.
"This boy is a flatterer."
"As to how?"
"He asks for the job of looking after my fief, and I haven't baited a hook yet!"—Kansas City Journal.

A LITTLE HINT.
Girl's Father—But how can you support my daughter? Twenty dollars a week won't pay the rent.
Father—You don't mean to say you'll charge Edith and me rent, do you?—Boston Transcript.

OKLAHOMA SOCIETY ITEM.

march was the increased number of dress suits.—Antler Times-Record.

SEASON'S PLEDGES MET
BY DISTRICT CHAPTERDaughters of Confederacy Plan September Activities.

Robert E. Lee Chapter, No. 644, United Daughters of the Confederacy held its last regular meeting of the season Tuesday evening at Confederate Memorial Home, the president, Mrs. Walter E. Hutton, presiding.
At the beginning of the season pledges were made amounting to $1,350, the larger part of which was raised through the Dixie ball. Of the pledges made, $1,000 was for the Confederate Memorial Home, $250 for the Confederate reunion, and $100 for minor philanthropic work. All pledges have been met, with the exception of $100, still due the Confederate Home fund, for which a lawn fete will be given about the middle of July. Five dollars was pledged at this meeting for Red Cross work. The chapter will begin its next season's work by giving a rummage sale the last week in September. The following were admitted to membership: Mrs. F. N. Woodson, Mrs. C. B.
Keller, Miss Birdie M. Ledman, and Miss Myrtle A. Homes. The meeting closed with Southern melodies, rendered by Mrs. Charles Hill, and recitations and readings by Mrs. Wallace Street and Miss Katherine Wooten.
Refreshments were served by Mrs.
Horace Whitaker and her assistants.

Winston Churchill entertained a dinner party of twelve at the Shoreham last night.

Col. and Mrs. William H. Johnston have given up their house on Ash-mad place. Mrs. Johnston, with Miss Genevieve Johnston, left Washington yesterday for Mrs. Johnston's old home in St. Louis, where they will visit her mother, Mrs. Palmira Papin Wilkinson. They will also visit Capt. and Mrs. J. H. Christie, the latter a sister of Mrs. Johnston.

Miss Elizabeth Moseley, Dean, of Scarborough, the Hudson, N. Y., daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Dean, of Boston, was married at noon yesterday in the home of her brother, Paul Dudley Dean, Salisbury road, to Congressman George B.
Francis, of New York city. The bride is a graduate of Radcliffe College.
Mr. Francis, who is a graduate of Brown University and the Harvard Law School, is the representative in Congress of the Eighteenth New York district. The officiating clergyman was the Rev. Charles E. Park.
Mr. Wilson B. Brice, of New York city, was the best man.
